The Impossible Observer 2014-10-17 because of the high cost of publishing a book containing over 70 color photographs raised the cost of the color edition beyond the reach of many readers i decided to publish a lower priced edition using black and white photographs it is the same cookbook memoir that contains 125 recipes from 17 caribbean islands it is still more than a cookbook that showcases meals and beverages of the caribbean it is unchanged from the memoir that tells the story of how pat lovelace created a menu to satisfy the sophisticated tastes of guests visiting pat and guy s upscale boutique hotel the book is still a chronicle of her experiences on the islands where she collected the recipes pat and her husband built the windmills plantation on the remote island of salt cay in the turks and caicos in the 1980 s this was well before those islands became the prime tourist destination that they are today the island government sold the land for the project to pat and her husband contingent upon their using only local help to build and operate the hotel pat s kitchen staff was therefore selected from local women who had no culinary experience other than cooking simple island meals in their homes the task was further complicated by the fact that all food items other than conch lobster and fish had to be flown from the us to the island of grand turk clear customs and then be loaded onto a ferryboat for transport to salt cay after which it would eventually be trucked to the hotel fresh and frozen foods did not survive the ordeal pat was limited to canned food and vegetables that could be stored without refrigeration she was able to use only the few frozen items that she could carry in cooler boxes with her luggage on her monthly buying trips to miami using recipes she had collected while visiting 32 caribbean islands with her resort architect husband she created her tour of the caribbean menu the recipes had to be simple enough for her staff to understand and execute yet good enough to please the palates of her guests the positive reaction to pat s culinary tour de force is documented in hundreds of letters of praise from her guests and their requests to food magazines for pat s recipes

Reckoning 2019 this book which won the university of delaware press s 1992 competition in eighteenth century studies argues that samuel richardson s clarissa is constructed from three different plot structures the tested woman plot whose archetypes are found in the biblical stories of eve and job and whose best known literary expressions occur in renaissance drama is a social plot examining the patriarchal conflicts of clarissa s world by means of a test of her obedience to familial authority followed by a trial that publicly judges the choices she has made the novel s other two plots represent the opposed life trajectories of the central characters the don juan plot a literary artifact of the enlightenment carries lovelace through the existential traumas of the rake s unassuageable desire to his obligatory encounter with the figure of death the prudence plot a narrative voicing the tradition of christianized classical virtue ethics organizes clarissa s living and dying in terms of her pursuit of excellence and presents her completed self to the judgment of god in discussing how the tested woman plot controls the novel s structure lois e bueler demonstrates the sophistication with which richardson exploits the stereotypical character functions of temptation accusation defense and judgment brought to bear upon the tested woman and shows how the novel s most radical permutation of this plot its undermining of the paternal authority of mr harlowe gives structural expression to the subordination of human to divine judgment which represents richardson s didactic intention this study also examines the connections among the plots how clarissa s self scrutinizing response to the pressures of test and trial and her refusal to achieve respectability at the expense of her integrity is explained by her pursuit of christian prudence and how lovelace s inability to fathom the disappearance of his tempter function after the rape as well as his inability to respond as does belford to clarissa s exemplary influence is an expression of his nature as protagonist in the don juan plot richardson conducts all three plots concurrently bueler demonstrates by exploiting the psychologically and dramatically rich resources of simultaneous dialogue and soliloquy inherent in the epistolary genre and she suggests that the participatory nature of the trial phase of the tested woman plot which lures readers to adopt the functions of accusation defense and judgment brought to bear upon the woman at its center helps account for the intensely partisan judgmental reactions that readers have always had to richardson s great novel
