this thesis deals with the concept and consequences of marketization in the nonprofit sector marketization describes the process of nonprofit organizations becoming more business like and is caused among other things by increased competition for scarce resources the rise of professionalism and calls for more transparency and efficiency by funders and the public research about marketization is inconclusive some researchers believe marketization can increase not only efficiency but also effectiveness of organizations while others fear that nonprofits lose their focus on a social mission the four articles presented in this thesis focus on the theoretical and practical implications of nonprofits relying more on earned income a dominant feature of marketization and nonprofits actively and passively adopting management practices and tools from the for profit sector another key characteristic of increased marketization the results show that marketization can increase the economic and social performance of an organization and when handled well and implemented through a clear strategic focus foster mission achievement particularly the focus on beneficiaries and internal processes can help organizations to better fulfill their mission a loss of focus on the mission must be feared if regulatory forces act on the organization without a simultaneous professionalization of management or if an organization focuses too much on its competitors nonprofits face a myriad of challenges in establishing and maintaining financial sustainability and these challenges are exacerbated for nonprofits serving low resources high need communities this literature review identifies key themes and findings that may inform operations and decisionmaking related to improving sustainability in such organizations the authors conducted systematic literature searches using a combination of academic search engines and the broader internet they identify and discuss key challenges of financial sustainability for nonprofits such as over reliance on external funding sources demonstrating value and accountability to funders and promoting community engagement and leadership as well as promising practices for meeting these challenges and achieving financial sustainability additionally the authors discuss unique challenges faced by nonprofits serving low resources high need populations it is the authors' hope that this review will enhance the limited literature on financial sustainability in low resource or high need communities and will contribute to an evidence base for promising practices providing leaders of and investors in nonprofits the ability to support and promote growth among organizations serving those most in need
