if you want to help people learn from activities exercises or experiences this book is for you this book fills a gap it is the gap between doing an activity and learning from it plenty of books describe activities that are good for icebreaking for team building for project management or for cross cultural understanding etc a few of these books do give advice about reviewing or debriefing the activities and 90 of the times it reads here are some questions you can ask how s that for boring and or limiting the result of such advice is that reviews are often dull and they dwell on what went wrong when reading they give off a feeling of discomfort but why is that well one of the reasons is because the same people speak up all the time and that bores and might even annoy the rest of the participants thus reviewing gets a bad name and people just want the review to finish as quickly as possible so that they can get on with the next activity this is a rare book for two reasons it is about reviewing how many books have you come across on this subject it is about reviewing actively which makes it not just rare but unique with the help of this book you can make reviews at least as engaging as the activities you are reviewing no more discomfort no more unwanted silences no more superficial reviews just engaging and practical ways to help people learn from experience how does that sound for a change media attention can play a profound role in whether or not officials act on a policy issue but how policy issues make the news in the first place has remained a puzzle why do some issues go viral and then just as quickly fall off the radar how is it that the media can sustain public interest for months in a complex story like negotiations over obamacare while ignoring other important issues in favor of stories on balloon boy with making the news amber boydstun offers an eye opening look at the explosive patterns of media attention that determine which issues are brought before the public at the heart of her argument is the observation that the media have two modes an alarm mode for breaking stories and a patrol mode for covering them in greater depth while institutional incentives often initiate alarm mode around a story they also propel news outlets into the watchdog like patrol mode around its policy implications until the next big news item breaks what results from this pattern of fixation followed by rapid change is skewed coverage of policy issues with a few receiving the majority of media attention while others receive none at all boydstun documents this systemic explosiveness and skew through analysis of media coverage across policy issues including in depth looks at the waxing and waning of coverage around two issues capital punishment and the war on terror making the news shows how the seemingly unpredictable day to day decisions of the newsroom produce distinct patterns of operation with implications good and bad for national politics
